RESUME OF WILLIAM JAMES HAGA

William J. Haga was born in Detroit, Michigan, on 3 April 1938. He attended Wayne State University in Detroit, majoring in personnel administration with minors in economics and English. He received a B.B.A. degree in June 1960.

His military service involved three years as a medical administration officer in the Air Force. During the 1963-68 interval he worked as a public relations executive for Chrysler Corporation, Kennecott Cooper Corporation, and Bell and Howell Company. He was also a public relations and advertising account executive for a Chicago agency.

He pursued graduate work in organizational sociology at the University of Illinois in Urbana. He received an M.A. degree in June 1970, and a Ph.D. in January 1972. He held a National Science Foundation fellowship in the social implications of science and technology, and joined the junior staff of the Coordinated Science Laboratory of the University of Illinois. In 1971 he was named to the steering committee of the Regional Role of Engineering Colleges project of the National Science Foundation. His primary research experience was the study of professionalism and bureaucracy under Professor George Graen. Other work included an assistantship in the study of the rapid industrialization of rural communities for the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

His teaching experience involved two semesters in the University of Illinois sociology department as an instructor in 1972. Since 1970 he had been an instructor with the University of Illinois Extension Division.

In September 1972 he joined the faculty of the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, California, where he is teaching in the Department of Administrative Sciences.
